

Directors' Duties Training

Understanding director responsibilities and liabilities

Overview

The role of a company director is a busy one. On top of your day-to-day work, you also have to keep up with the many duties and responsibilities imposed by corporate governance rules and legislation – which is where this course can help.

Why attend?

This half day course, delivered by a corporate governance expert from our corporate legal team, will help you:

- clearly understand the role, duties and responsibilities imposed on directors
- manage potential risks if directors fail to meet those standards
- reduce the chances of future financial and personal penalties

This course will also help companies and their boards demonstrate that they have taken positive steps to make sure their directors have been properly trained and fully understand their role.

Who should attend?

This course is essential for existing directors, who may want to understand better the full extent of their duties. It is also ideal for any directors based outside the UK and are not fully aware of their specific requirements under English law, or anyone who is considering becoming a director in future.
